

Lyveden Way

The Lyveden Way is a walk through part of the ancient Rockingham Forest, beginning at Fernyn Woods Country Park. The area is steeped in local and natural history, with a landscape that may have changed little over the past 2000 years. The Country Park is home to a range of wildlife - from colourful butterflies, secretive badgers and fallow deer to the majestic red kite. The route leaves the park and heads east along the perimeter of Fernyn Woods. It continues across open countryside towards Lady Wood Head and follows the perimeter of the wood towards Lyveden New Bield.

It was his son, Francis Tresham, who later became embroiled in the Gunpowder Plot. The New Bield was incomplete when Sir Thomas died in 1605 and remains a haunting survival of the Elizabethan age together with extensive remains of the original garden, which restoration work is beginning to reveal. Lyveden is owned and managed by the National Trust and is open daily from 1st April to 31st October except Monday and Tuesday. It is open every day in August and weekends throughout February, March and November.

Lyveden New Bield dominates the local landscape. It was designed by Sir Thomas Tresham, to express his devout Catholic faith during the reign of the Protestant Queen Elizabeth I.

Leaving Lyveden New Bield, the route turns south-east through Lifford Wood towards Wadenhoe village. Wadenhoe dates back to at least Saxon times and is regarded as one of the prettiest villages in Northamptonshire. Refreshments are available from the Kings Head which has a delightful beer garden next to the River Nene.

Leaving Wadenhoe, the route passes St Michaels and All Angels Church which stands alone at the edge of the village. The Church contains interesting memorials and stained glass windows, dedicated to members of local eminent families. The path begins to turn north-west crossing pasture fields and passes alongside and through woodland before it rejoins the outward route after Lady Wood Head.
